The Lexington Herald

Acknowledges but not superior among the leading newspapers of Kentucky. It is the First Newspaper of Central Kentucky, and in many respects the First Newspaper of the State.

The Basis of This Claim

The controversy over the Discovery of the North Pole has been the world sensation. The Herald is the only paper in Kentucky to purchase and receive by wire the copyrighted stories of both claimants to the honor.

The Fight for the 1909 Tobacco Pool has been the one Kentucky topic overshadowing State interest in the last three months. The future historian when looking for material upon which to make up the final historical estimate of this history-making struggle will find in the files of The Lexington Herald the most complete contemporary record.

The Most Complete reports ever given was the verdict of those who attended the recent centennial convention of the Christian Church in Kentucky on the way in which this event was handled in The Herald.

The Blue Grass Region is the Heart of Kentucky, the educational center, the center of the State's best agriculture, and the great Kentucky news center. The Lexington Herald is the only paper that prints the news of the Blue Grass.

Have you noticed The Herald's Sporting Page recently? Nothing like in Kentucky equal to it. If you are interested in sports read The Herald a week and you will be delighted.

The Blue Grass Farmer edition printed every Monday morning is growing in circulation. A competent man will hereafter devote his entire time to making this one great Agricultural Weekly of Kentucky.

The Sunday Herald alone is worth the yearly subscription price. It compares favorably in the extent and variety of its features with the largest metropolitan Sunday papers.

A SPECIAL OFFER For the next two weeks The Herald offers to send all editions to new subscribers to January 1st on receipt of $1.00.
