Notes

E.E. Barton Papers, Pendleton County Public Library, Falmouth, Kentucky

Birth: 1769 per Barton Collection, film 0358473

Census: 1810, U.S. Pendleton County, KY., page 114

According to census, they had one female slave over the age of 45.

George Taylor was a farmer, according to census records of 1850, page 387

E.E. Barton Collection:

George taylor brought his wife with him from VA on his second trip to KY. They walked the whole way.

Geo. had a brother, John, who lived at Flower Creek, and opened one room of his house for a church. id.

Robert Henry and Dudley were hair-(sic., hare-)lipped.

George Taylor came from Stafford County after the turn of the century (1800) and opened the first school in this settlement. His father, William, had inherited Dr. Robert Taylor's estate. At the death of his father, he went to VA and brought his (William) negroes to KY. He received an annuity from the estate and at his death, the remainder was divided among his children.
